

The Community Clinic Association of Los Angeles County (CCALAC) stands in solidarity with the Asian American and Pacific Islander (AAPI) community. We condemn discrimination, racism, and violence committed against Asian Americans and all people everywhere.

Recent attacks on AAPI communities highlight the ongoing and longstanding structural anti-Asian and anti-immigrant racism in our country. This structural racism is also at the root of the health disparities that have been exacerbated by the COVID-19 pandemic. AAPI communities have experienced disproportionate rates of infection and death, job losses and social isolation. The COVID-19 fatality rate for AAPI Californians is 3 times that of the overall population, and it is over 4 times higher in Los Angeles County.

Founded out of the civil rights movement, community health centers are committed to dismantling systemic racism and advancing health equity. We stand with our AAPI communities and allies. We see you. We stand with you. We're here to serve you.
