

In celebration of
COMMUNITY HEALTH CENTER WEEK

Building Labor/Community Power: A Roadmap for Expanding Access to Care

Through the partnership of community organizations, immigrant and civil rights groups, community health centers, and labor unions, we've advocated for and secured critical investment in the state budget that moves California closer to healthcare justice and equity. Together, we've spoken out about the needs of our communities and that our clinics need more workforce resources to provide the care that our patients need and deserve. As a result California leaders have committed $75 million in historic investment in community clinic workforce development and retention.

This is just the beginning. Together we can strengthen our safety net, increase access to health services, and improve Medi-Cal. Join us to learn more about how we are creating a healthy California for all by empowering workers and building labor/community power.
